

Life has been very peaceful since all the calls have stopped, especially the calls around dinner time, weekends and after 10 pm. The solicitors are so persistent that they basically harass you to listen to them. And if you screen the call and don't answer they will keep trying until you do - then you have to be rude and hang up on them just to get rid of them. It was a constant nuisance and is no more! Also, I no longer have to be on edge when the phone rings late at night, thinking the worst possible thought that a family member is hurt or has died. I am very happy with the do not call law, it has increased the quality of my life and others as well. By the way, owning a phone is a luxury, why would anyone want to pay for a monthly service if they will be harassed by solicitors 24/7?
